OKLAHOMA CITY, June 1, 2020 – Daily Living Centers of Oklahoma welcomes Jessica Clayton as president and chief executive officer. Clayton brings more than a decade of leadership to the role.

“Outstanding professional qualifications as well as a notable record of service to the community through volunteerism made Clayton an ideal candidate,” said Ellyn Hefner, Daily Living Centers board president.

Clayton’s previous roles include executive positions at Mercy Health Foundation and First United Bank. Clayton is a graduate of the University of Central Oklahoma. She is currently serving her second term as honorary commander for the Tinker Air Force Base 552nd Air Control Wing.

“I look forward to continuing Daily Living Centers’ legacy of compassion and advocacy for aging adults and adults with disabilities. Serving both caregivers and those being cared for is vital in our communities,” said Clayton. “These services impact the lives of so many families in our state.”

Daily Living Centers provides reliable services for caregivers who need extra support and participants who need a safe space for engagement, interaction or rest.

“Quality respite care provides family members peace of mind and assurance that their loved ones’ needs are addressed,” said Clayton. “Wellness of mind, body and spirit through socialization, nutrition and staying active are made possible through community partnerships. My goal is to make organizational growth possible through servant leadership, strategic planning, advocacy and development.”
